JOSEPH T. GORDON PRIZE IN SOUTHWESTERN STUDIES, presented by Maria Varela, Acting Director Southwest Studies — PROFESSOR DOUGLAS MONROY
The Joseph T. Gordon Prize in Southwestern Studies was funded by an anonymous donor for the purpose of recognizing outstanding achievement in scholarship and creative expression in Southwest Studies. Dr. Gordon is a distinguished professor emeritus of the Colorado College Department of English and the founding director for the Hulbert Center for Southwestern Studies. Under his vision and leadership he designed and developed funding for an interdisciplinary academic program, the Hulbert Center Press, the Jackson Fellowships to promote faculty scholarship on the Southwest, the Norman Lecture for visiting Southwestern scholars, and the WES lecture on Southwestern women's topics. His academic leadership of the Southwest Studies program was infused with an infectious passion for the region which translated into successfully encouraging other faculty to innovate interdisciplinary coursework on the Southwest which, in his words, is a "great source of life, religion, literature and art." Joe Gordon institutionalized the program by raising endowments and grants to renovate the Dern House as the Center for Southwest Studies and to purchase and build the facilities on the Baca Campus. The Southwest Studies Faculty Advisory Committee developed the criteria and standards for the prize and selected the $1000 prizewinner.
