Fellow Name: Kendall Kultgen

PIFP Partner Organization: Concrete Couch

Please give a brief description of what you do for your organization:
I work in all facets of the organization: teaching, constructing, organizing, doing outreach, collaborating, creating, and more.

What’s the most interesting thing you’ve learned in your fellowship so far?
I learned how to pour concrete on my first day!

Why did you want to become a PIFP Fellow?
I feel that non-profits target local communities, collaborate, and advocate for people in ways that advance our society toward a just and sustainable future where all voices can be heard and community resilience is high. The PIFP fellowship program is an amazing opportunity to become familiar with many such organizations and it provides a bridge from Colorado College into the local non-profit community of Colorado Springs, which I wanted to join.

What activities outside of your work do you enjoy?
I enjoy hiking, crafting, collaging, knitting, biking, backpacking, running, doing yoga, watching films, reading, and playing with dogs.

What is something most people would be surprised to know about you?
Most people are surprised to find out I was born and raised in Colorado Springs, as the overwhelming majority of CC students are not from the Springs. But as I went through college I even came to be proud of it!
