WINTER 2016

FOUNDED IN 1889 TO GIVE ASSISTANCE TO THE STUDENTS OF COLORADO COLLEGE

WES Donates $10,000 to CC's Tutt Library Special Collections

At its October 1, 2015 Board of Managers meeting, WES presented Tutt Library Special Collections (SC) Curator Jessy Randall with a check for $10,000. This gift was presented

“...for the purpose of enhancing the college curriculum by acquiring significant books and documents that focus on women's history and women's contributions to society.”

WES has a long history of supporting SC, which Jessy explained as the featured speaker at our October 29 fall luncheon in Gaylord Hall. She encouraged attendees to see and touch samples from SC, including a 4000-year-old cuneiform and a leaf from a Gutenberg Bible.

We encourage everyone to visit the Special Collections blog to see the marvelous acquisitions that have been made with our WES gift: <http://sites.coloradocollege.edu/ccspecialcollections/>

We were also lucky to be able to celebrate the birthday of WES life member Lucy McLeod with her daughters, Laurel and Lynn, at the fall luncheon! ❧

The WOMAN'S EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY (WES) is an autonomous community organization founded on April 20, 1889, to foster support of Colorado College. Its purposes are to bring community and college together, to give assistance to students of the college, and to undertake programs and projects to benefit the college, particularly women of the college. Gifts to WES are tax-deductible. Newsfocus is published twice a year as a service to members and friends of WES.

Message from the Co-Presidents

Meg Chojnacki and Ann Burek

What a busy and exciting time it is for WES. In September, the Van Briggie Festival was an unbelievable success. Thanks to Sarah Healy and her various committees for their time, energy, and expertise. Also, WES hosted a lovely Scholar Tea where the new Scholars were introduced to the other Scholars and to the General Membership. Kudos to the Program and Scholarship Committees.

In October at the Colorado College Scholarship Luncheon, the Keynote Speaker was WES scholar Amairani Alamillo. She was an incredible representative for both the college and for WES. The October Board Meeting was exciting because we were able to present a $10,000 check to Jessie Randall, the Curator for the Tutt Library Special Collections. The money was used for significant items about, related to, or written by women. Jessie then spoke on the history of the printed word at the Fall Luncheon; she brought interesting examples and charming stories from each era.

In November, all of the chairs and committees were working diligently to prepare for the rest of 2015 and the beginning of 2016. December saw WES participation at the Colorado College Craft Fair and the much-awaited Cookiefest for the scholars and members. On January 23, 2016 the Board held a Retreat for education, discussion, and fellowship at the Penrose House.

On a personal note, I (Meg) would like to thank the Board Members, especially Ann Burek and Nancy Baxter, for their concern and help during my husband's illness. He is improving each day, and I hope to be back full-time very soon! ☺

The September 12, 2015 Van Briggie Festival, true to our founders' mission, invited community partners to join us in love of history, the arts, historic preservation, and scholarship. In another record-breaking year, 416 Festival attendees delighted not only in the Van Briggie Pottery building tour, but enjoyed adjacent garden tours by the COS Horticulture Art Society, pot-throwing by the Fine Art Center's Bemis School of Art potters, and displays by the Historic Preservation Alliance and the COS Pioneers Museum.

In addition to the lovely Van Briggie cards, patrons were able to obtain the Spring 2002 Van Briggie reprint issue of Kiva Magazine, commemorative tins of Patsy's "Peanut Briggie," Van Briggie tile cookies, and a special Van Briggie blend of Roasted! Coffee.

All proceeds helped support our scholarship fund. Please mark your calendars for the next Van Briggie Festival: Saturday, September 10, 2016. ☞

News from Current WES Scholars

WES Scholars Share How WES Supports Their Studies

WES Scholar Emma Wilson's studies and travels in Chile and the Atacama Desert.

WES Scholar Emma Wilson

Last year I was lucky enough to travel to Santiago, Chile to study Spanish and contemporary Chilean politics with the help of WES funds that covered the majority of my travel expenses. As a freshman, studying abroad seemed out of reach as I was still adjusting to college life and the independence that came with it. However, the support of WES and my WES mentor led me to pursue such an amazing experience that has pushed me to pursue a Spanish major and make even more travel plans for my college career.

Coming from a small mountain town, I found Santiago to be a complete culture shock. I had never used a complicated bus system or ridden the metro, and I had to learn to navigate the city completely in Spanish. However, I was extremely fortunate to be welcomed into the home of a loving host family who supported me over the two months as I grew in my Spanish-speaking abilities and general comfort in Santiago. My familia chilena consisted of Rosa, an English-to-Japanese translator in the middle of finishing her doctorate; José, a successful lawyer; Sofia or Sofita, my adorable one-year-old host sister; and Masari, an excitable French bull-dog.

I spent the two blocks exploring Santiago, frequenting various cafes as I worked on homework, and wandered the streets as I gathered my bearings. My classes were supplemented by excursions around the city that allowed for better understanding of our surroundings and the history of the country. I also spent time getting to know the surrounding cities, including Valparaiso, Viña del Mar, and Pomaire, with my class and host family. The most noteworthy was Valparaiso, known worldwide for its incredible street art where nearly every surface is covered by a painting, from walls to doors to rooftops to garbage trucks. For our block break, we traveled to Easter Island, where we explored and observed the local culture and famous moai statues scattered across the small landmass, an absolutely breathtaking experience.

The end of the two months featured a trip to the Atacama Desert, the driest desert in the world, where I traveled with a friend and her mom. We went on various tours featuring the area's attractions, including the salt flats of the Valle de la Luna, the geysers of Tatio, the salt-concentrated Laguna Cejar, and a stargazing tour of the desert's cloudless sky.

Because of the support of WES, I was granted an incomparable opportunity to travel early on in my college career that has benefited me in countless ways since returning to the United States. The experience I gained has aided me greatly in my studies and aspirations for the future. I already look forward to making my way back to South America to continue exploring other cultures and languages and to gain a better understanding of the world itself. ✨

My Summer with Marianne Stoller, by Kendra Wuerth

Over the summer of 2015 I had the privilege of working on a project called, "The Marianne Stoller Archives Research Project." Marianne Stoller was a distinguished anthropologist of the Southwest, and she dedicated her life to her work, leaving behind an impressive legacy. With this project, it has been my goal to make Marianne's work withstand the test of time, digitizing her legacy so that it can be used by future generations of researchers.

WES Scholar Kendra Wuerth (above) working on "The Marianne Stoller Archives Research Project" in the summer of 2015.

Toward the end of the second semester of my freshman year at Colorado College, I worked closely with Anthropology Department Professor Mario Montaña. Putting forth effort to secure my grant to work on this project over the summer, I know that to him I am beyond appreciative for such an opportunity.

The primary topic of my research this summer was Marianne Stoller. Marianne was an anthropologist at CC for a number of years who specialized in Southwest cultures, particularly on the folk arts of the Southwest. Over the course of her career, Marianne developed a vast collection of materials including letters, legal documents related to indigenous litigation cases, photos, illustrations, slides, and much more. As I went through the process of learning about Marianne’s career and the topics that most intrigued her, I realized that this research project fills a void in the study of women anthropologists in the Southwest. While research on women anthropologists is a narrow field, research on women anthropologists of the Southwest is even more obscure. For this reason, I began to supplement my work on Marianne’s materials with research of my own, summarizing the work of several women anthropologists in the Southwest and then focusing on the key issues addressed by these women.

The ultimate goal of this research is to aide both the Anthropology Department and the Southwest Studies Department to enhance their curricula regarding the inclusion of women in the intellectual development of Southwest studies and anthropology. I hope one day soon there will be an online archive in which Marianne’s legacy will be available to all researchers. This archive will be available on the Colorado College web-site, either through the anthropology department or the library.

I guess you could say that this research project fell into my lap at a time when I was trying to figure out my future, my life, and whether or not I should major in anthropology. I felt like this opportunity was somehow fate pointing me in the right direction. At the beginning of the year, when I found out that I was to be a WES scholarship recipient, I had also been chosen by Marianne Stoller herself to be the Marianne Stoller Scholar of my year. This was an honor that Professor Montaña had been unaware of during his selection process. Looking back, I think that I was not so much choosing anthropology as my major, but rather anthropology was choosing me! ✨

IN MEMORIAM: Professor Emerita Marianne Stoller

WES member and Colorado College Professor Emerita of Anthropology Marianne Stoller passed away on December 13, 2015. She served as chair of CC’s Anthropology Department twice throughout her career, as well as directing the college’s Southwest Studies summer institutes.

A keen interest in the interactions of different cultures inspired Marianne’s life and career. She led summer digs in the late 1980s and early ‘90s that uncovered a 17th-century Spanish Colonial ranch in La Cienega, New Mexico — one of only six known pre-revolt Spanish colonial sites in New Mexico.

Marianne graduated from Adams State College with a degree in art, and received a master’s degree in art from Denver University. After being awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to study Maori art in New Zealand, she studied in the Fiji Islands and Tahiti. It was while in Tahiti that she became interested in ethnographic history: the study of people in historic times, which she defined as the time after European contact and conquest. Marianne received her Ph.D. in ethnohistory from the University of Pennsylvania in 1979 and returned to Colorado, gradually drifting back to her “first love” — the Southwest. An article in the spring 1998 issue of La Tertulia quotes Marianne as saying the highlight of her career at CC was “aiding and abetting” Joe Gordon in establishing the Southwest Studies program.

After retiring in 1998, Stoller served on WES’s Board of Managers. She led tours of the Southwest and other regions, including the California missions and the Canadian Rockies, connecting a wide range of people with the college and raising more than $50,000 for WES scholarships. Members of WES and PILLAR still enjoy these trips today. WES continues to honor the work and impact of Marianne through naming a Stoller Scholar annually in each class of WES scholarship recipients.

A spring celebration of her life is planned with students, alumni, and colleagues. ✨

Big News of Anna Kisken

Last September, as former WES mentor B. Fox was slowly making her way east on Lee Highway in Arlington, Virginia, the car's Bluetooth indicated a call from Fairbanks, Alaska – Anna Kisken '15 was calling. An excited familiar voice filled B's car, and the call went something like this "Oh B, I have some news, you won our wager. Jordan proposed."

Yes, B did make a wager with Anna that handsome, educated, and thoughtful Jordan Sawyer would propose before January 1, 2016. During graduation weekend, B and Anna, along with Anna's family, were enjoying festivities in Bemis Hall when Jordan and Anna sat down at the piano and played a little duet together. One could feel their chemistry.

Anna is currently working in Fairbanks as an Activity Specialist at a local non-profit. Jordan, also from the Fairbanks area, grew up in the famous little town called the North Pole and is employed as a teacher. The wedding will be July 23, 2016 on the Kisken family acreage. B will be there for the celebration.

The newlyweds are planning to make their first home in Missoula, Montana, as Anna has applied to the University of Montana to study for a master's degree in School Psychology. Jordan is a graduate of this university. What a wonderful place to begin their life together!

Three years ago B wrote an article for the Newsfocus titled The Joys of Being a WES Mentor. As you can see, the joys didn't end when her scholar graduated. They live on and multiply as she has added Anna's family and fiancé to her list of special friends.

Dr. Namrita Singh

Former WES scholar, Dr. Namrita Singh (Class of 2005) was the guest speaker at a brown bag luncheon for current WES scholars on October 22, 2015 at the Worner Center. After graduating from CC, Namrita continued her education at Johns Hopkins University, where she earned a Ph.D. in Public Health. She is currently moving to Kiev, Ukraine with a U.S. team who will be training Ukrainian mental health workers to work with refugees. Namrita is especially interested in the mental health issues refugees face as they adjust to living in a new place.

The scholars who attended the luncheon enjoyed learning about Namrita's experiences as a grad student and also about her travels and work in the medical field. Thanks Namrita!

Kenzie Mulligan-Buckmiller

Kenzie Mulligan-Buckmiller, WES scholar, Class of 2015, is working as Health Education Specialist at CC's Wellness Resource Center on the second floor of Worner Center. With a degree in Molecular Biology and minors in Chemistry and Feminist and Gender Studies, she devotes her energies to prevention, awareness, and education. Her role includes everything from promoting flu shots to giving informative talks on topics such as "hook-up culture." As a student, Kenzie was involved in the Student Organization for Sexual Safety (SOSS) all four years and is passionate about sexual health and violence prevention.

After the November WES Board meeting, the WES Board of Managers was treated to a tour of the historic Penrose House by Reservations Coordinator, Meghan Shaver.
