

Katrina Miller-Stevens
Professor of Economics and Business, Colorado College
Faculty Director, Public Interest Fellowship Program

Kat Miller-Stevens worked in the nonprofit sector in Denver for ten years as a budget coordinator, grants manager, and program evaluator. Currently, she teaches nonprofit-related courses in the Economics & Business department at Colorado College. Her research interests bridge the nonprofit, public, and private sectors with particular focus on individual employee values and the nonprofit sector's role in lobbying and collaboration. Kat earned her undergraduate Liberal Arts degree in History from Colorado State University in 1999, a Master of Nonprofit Management degree from Regis University in 2004, and a Ph.D. in Public Affairs from the University of Colorado Denver in 2010. Prior to joining Colorado College, she taught for six years in the School of Public Service at Old Dominion University in Virginia. She is also a proud AmeriCorps alumna.
